Lledr Bridge. The River Lledr is a tributary of the River Conway, and joins the main stream close to Bettws-y-Coed. It winds its way through a beautiful valley known as Glyn Lledr, where may be found some of the most charming scenery of this delightful district. Through the Glyn run both the high road and the railway, and to see its beauties to their full advantage visitors are recommended to walk or drive along the former.
